EDUCATIONAL CENSUS OF IRELAND.

INTRODUCTION.

At the very first meeting of the Commissioners, on 19th February, 1868, it was suggested that, following the precedent of the late Scottish Education Commission, information should be specially collected concerning the number of children actually receiving elementary education in Ireland, and the schools through which such education was dispensed to them. Independently of general reasons for such a proceeding, it was rendered specially advisable on account of the questions which had been raised concerning the accuracy and authenticity of the numbers annually returned by the Commissioners of National Education as being inscribed on the rolls of the schools connected with the National Board, or as having made an average attendance at school during the year. Moreover there was no other reliable way by which it could be ascertained how many children were being educated in elementary schools not connected with the National Board.

Having considered the matter, the Commissioners made application to the Chief Secretary for Ireland to allow the attendance, at a meeting of the Commission, of the Inspector-General of Constabulary, or any officer deputed by him, in order that the Commissioners might inquire of him whether the men under his control can undertake the duty of collecting such information.

Accordingly, on 10th March, 1868, Mr. Brownrigg, Assistant Inspector-General of Constabulary, waited upon the Commissioners, and conferred with them upon the taking of an Educational Census, through the Constabulary. Mr. Brownrigg suggested:—

(1.) That the names of all existing elementary schools should be furnished by Constabulary districts, giving the names of parishes and townlands.

(2.) That the Inspector-General should send a general order to County Inspectors, to furnish information; and the Secretaries of the Royal Commission should send, direct to the County Inspectors, forms for the collection of the required information.

(3.) That, as regards taking the Census of attendance on some given day, the orders should be issued, for security of secrecy, by the Inspector-General of Constabulary.

These suggestions having been approved by the Commissioners, the Secretaries were directed to procure the necessary authority, and to take such other steps as might be requisite for carrying out the proposed Educational Census.

The Government at once gave authority that "Statistical Returns, with respect to Primary Schools in Ireland, should be procured through the medium of the Constabulary."

But the details of the arrangements by which the proposed Census of elementary schools and their scholars should be carried out required, it was found, careful consideration in order to be effective. The proceeding was, in many respects, without precedent. On former occasions, when an Educational Census of the country was taken, the enumerators were not obliged to exclude from their visits any schools whatsoever. They visited all indiscriminately of whatever kind, being only solicitous about the accurate reckoning of the children actually present in the school, and indifferent as to the quality and subjects of instruction. The separation of the different classes of schools was a later process, not performed by the local enumerators on the spot, but the result of inquiries carried out in a central office in Dublin. Now, however, the Constabulary were called upon to count up all the elementary schools in the country—a task which involved on their part the discrimination of those schools that limited their efforts to primary only from others of a higher character. Under these circumstances the preparation of the forms, according to which the proposed information should be collected by the Constabulary, was a matter of much care and some anxiety. One of the Secretaries was in almost daily communication on the subject with the Constabulary office; and it was chiefly owing to the attention, and the interest taken in the matter by the Constabulary authorities, and especially by the Inspector-General and Mr. Browning, the Chief Clerk, that the result has been so satisfactory.

The first step towards an accurate Educational Census was, obviously, to ascertain the actual number of elementary schools. The Constabulary organization furnished an easy method of doing this. The whole of Ireland is distributed among thirty-five County Inspectors.* The command of each of those officers is subdivided into a varying number of "Constabulary Districts" in the charge of so many Sub-Inspectors. Each Constabulary district comprises a certain number of Constabulary stations, within the area assigned to some one or other of which every inch of ground in the district must be found. It thus appears that every school-house in Ireland must be within the area of some Constabulary station, and must, within every twenty-four hours, be passed by a Constable in the regular routine of his "Beat." This at once suggested an easy method of reckoning the schools. The Constables at every station must be acquainted with the school-houses within their respective areas. The only point about which it was necessary to be careful was, that in their enumeration, they should reckon those schools only that were of an elementary character. But, here again, it may be observed that the condition of the members of the Constabulary themselves would be, at the same time, a help and a safeguard in the performance of their task; for the schools which they were called upon to number and return as "Primary Schools," were precisely those which professed to give an education similar to that which they themselves, or at least most of them, had received.

There is another consideration bearing upon the enumeration of schools by Constabulary districts, which it may not be out of place to mention here. In Ireland, the parish has ceased to have any importance as a civil topographical division; indeed, its corresponding ecclesiastical value is scarcely appreciable. The Presbyterian congregational arrangements are not defined by territorial limits and do not profess to embrace the whole island. The Roman Catholic parochial system, although essentially territorial, has, in its present settlement, ignored the old standing boundaries, and in most cases overstepped them. The peculiar circumstances of the Established Church led long since to the adoption of such an amalgamation of parishes as quite superseded the ancient parochial distribution of the country. Thus, all the ecclesiastical systems were of accord in their neglect of the old traditional parish boundaries; and as the civil importance of the parishes depended upon their ecclesiastical character, it disappeared as this became obsolete. The striking illustration of how much the parishes had fallen out of the recollection of men, as topographical divisions of practical utility, was afforded by the difficulty experienced by the officers engaged upon the Ordnance Survey of Ireland, of acquiring trustworthy local information as to the parochial boundaries. It is hardly possible to imagine such a case occurring in England, where the parochial system is so interwoven with the habits, traditions, and fiscal arrangements of the people. Perhaps, after all, this is but a confirmation of a theory often promulgated, that the parochial system is not indigenous in Ireland, but was introduced, with other changes, subsequent to the English invasion, and never acquired a hold upon the feelings or respect of the people.

There was, however, an ancient territorial division adopted by the rulers of later times—that, namely, according to baronies and townlands. These exist in full force and public recognition at the present day, precisely as they did in the time of Elizabeth and James, and usually under the same, or at least corresponding designations, by which they were known fourteen centuries back. They are eminently civil divisions; and the Constabulary authorities, in distributing their forces, have endeavoured to adhere to them as much as possible. Thus it frequently happens that a barony and a Sub-Inspector's district are contemporaneous; and, where grave reasons overrule this arrangement, the district boundary is made to follow that of a townland, so that the same townland is never found to be divided between two or more districts. Again, the unity of parishes is never regarded in the Constabulary arrangements; portions of the same parish are frequently found in different districts, but a townland is never divided, not only between different districts, but even (except in a very few special cases) between different stations. Unbroken townlands form the areas of the several stations, and consequently of the several districts.

Thus, an enumeration of schools by the Constabulary, while following the special territorial division which has been adopted for the purposes of the force, would, at the same time, be arranged according to the civil topographical divisions which are in force throughout the whole island. The advantages of this were apparent, not only for the temporary purpose of the Commission, but also with a view to further comparison and inquiry.

After much deliberation, the following form was agreed upon, as that according to which, in the first instance, the return of the number of the Primary Schools, actually existing in Ireland, should be made out.

_____ Constable in Charge of Sub-District

To every Sub-Inspector throughout Ireland there were forwarded, in the last week of April, 1868, such a number of copies of the preceding form, as in the opinion of the authorities in Dublin would be amply sufficient to meet all the requirements of the stations, or sub-districts under his command. Moreover, he was instructed to apply to the Secretaries of the Commission for a further supply of the forms should he find it necessary. As the object of this first enumeration was only to ascertain the number of Primary Schools actually existing, there was no necessity that the enumeration should be made simultaneously. It was proposed that each Constable, in charge of a station, should transmit the return of the schools within his own sub-district, when completed, to his Sub-Inspector. Then all the returns for the district, when collected together, were to be consolidated and entered upon a large sheet, which was nothing more than the form given above, printed upon a sheet of paper sufficiently long to include a very considerable number of schools. This larger form, when completed and authenticated by the signature of the Sub-Inspector, was to be transmitted to the Secretaries as the official return.

For clearness sake, the smaller form to be used by the Constables in their local enumeration was called "Form No. II.," and the larger form to be used by the Sub-Inspector for the consolidation of the local reports was called "Form No. I."

At the same time that the forms were transmitted to the Sub-Inspectors, the Inspector General issued the following circular to the Officers and Men of the Force.

"Constabulary Office, Dublin Castle, 22nd April, 1861.

"The Royal Commissioners of Inquiry into the state of Primary Education in Ireland having obtained the sanction of Her Majesty's Government for the collection by the Royal Irish Constabulary of certain Statistical Returns connected with the Primary Schools in Ireland, the attention of the Officers and Men is particularly requested to the following Instructions:—

- "1. The Sub-Inspector is requested to furnish to each Constable in charge of a Sub-district one of the enclosed Forms, No. II., with directions to have it correctly and carefully filled up and returned to him with as little delay as possible.
- "2. On receiving the Sub-district Returns, the Sub-Inspector will be good enough to have the information contained in them consolidated and entered on the large Return, Form No. I., which is then to be forwarded to the Secretaries of the Royal Commission, 46, Upper Sackville-street, Dublin, in the enclosed printed envelope.
- "3. Should any more Returns of either Form I. or Form II. be required, or should any further information be desired, a letter addressed to the Secretaries of the Royal Commission on Primary Education, 46, Upper Sackville-street, Dublin, will have immediate attention.
- "4. In filling up these Returns, it will be well to bear in mind that under the name of "Primary School" will be included the following classes of Schools:—
 (a) All Schools for the Poor, of whatever kind.
 (b) All National Schools.
 (c) All Schools connected with the Church Education Society, the Christian Brothers, or similar bodies or institutions.
 (d) All Schools, whether private or public, in which the course of instruction is similar to that followed in the National Schools.
- "5. In the last column the Constable will set down all information touching the School which has not been included under the preceding heads, and which he may deem useful.
- "6. The Returns from the Sub-districts, on the Forms No. II., will be filed and preserved for six months in the office of the district, in order to facilitate further reference if necessary.

"J. SWEENEY WOOD, Inspector-General."

The enumeration of the schools was soon effected, the returns being completed by the middle of May. It is unnecessary here to examine those returns at any length, or to characterize the information which they contain; a more suitable opportunity for doing this will present itself when the enumeration of the children in attendance shall be described.

This numbering of the children in actual attendance at the schools was not by any means the simple operation that one might at first suppose it to be. In the first place, the time when the numbers should be taken could not be easily determined. On the occasion of the general Census in 1861, the taking of those numbers was twice essayed. The first effort was as follows:—

In the Census forms left at each house, and in which were supposed to be entered the names and circumstances of all persons in Ireland on the night of 7th April, 1861, was a column setting out those who were "attending school" at the time. The following form* was also left at the several schools, to be filled up by the "Head of the Institution:"

* This form, it will be observed, is most elaborate and complete; but it fails to express on its face the distinction between schools of primary character and those which profess to give a higher class of instruction. A statistician might deduce from its information the number of children in the former class of schools; but the form itself does not satisfactorily give such a return.

Before the returns collected according to these forms could have been examined, the Census Commissioners determined to institute a fresh enumeration of school children, under the following circumstances:—

"The supplemental school forms . . . were issued in consequence of a communication addressed to us by the Commissioners of National Education in Ireland, to the effect that the returns for the week ended April 13th, 1861, did not represent the true average attendance of pupils at the National Schools, as the Easter holidays had only just then terminated, and the pupils had not generally resumed attendance. Considering it right, under the circumstances, to afford not only to the schools in connexion with the National system of education, but to all schools whatsoever an opportunity of furnishing a return, we distributed—with the sanction of the Government—and after due notice to the clergy of the various denominations and the heads of the several educational systems, these additional forms."

The following is the form above referred to:—

Thus, it appears that, in connexion with the Census of 1861, there are three different sources of information from which we may estimate the number of children attending schools in Ireland. These are (1) the "family returns,"* in which the head of each family was assumed to set down how many members of the family were "attending school;" (2) the "school returns," under form L, which were supposed to state the number of children "attending school during the week ending 13 April, 1861;"† (3) the "school returns" under form L 2, which were supposed to state "the number attending school on May 17th, 1861."‡ Perhaps it is not surprising that the information derived from these three sources is not only not identical, but is notably different. We give the summary "total of Ireland," as given in the Report of the Census Commissioners.†

Upon these returns, as set out in the preceding comparative tables, the Census Commissioners make some observations which—as bearing on the method of taking an educational census—are here quoted:—

"The family returns for the year 1861, represent 645,615 persons to have been under instruction, either at home or at school, on the 7th April in that year. The returns upon the form L No. 2, given in pursuance of due notice, represent the number of pupils in actual attendance at the schools which supplied those returns, to be 456,818 on the 17th May, 1861, or less by 178,677 than the number taken from the family returns. The number returned as attending school during the week ended April 13th, 1861, was

* See Census, Part II., Vol. 1., p. 23, passim.

† JRM, p. 22, Table XIX.

‡ All the figures, headings, &c., in this extract are exactly copied from Table XIX., as it stands in page 55 of Part II., Vol. 1., of the Census for Ireland for the year 1861. The arrangement has been slightly altered in order to adapt the extract being occasionally brought within the limits of the page, and also for facility of reference to the subsequent Summary Tables of the Census called out under this Commission.

436,373, or less by 29,945 than the numbers shown by the forms L No. 2, for a single day (the 17th May), and less by 203,822 than the number derived from the family returns.*

"The returns upon 'Form L No. 2,' furnished for a single day, may be regarded as giving an exceedingly high average, or more than an average for a day's attendance, because the managers and masters of the various schools having had ample notice of the date for which the return was to be made, in all probability exerted themselves to procure a full attendance for that day."†

One or two conclusions obviously follow from the consideration of the summary return quoted above, and the observations upon it of the Census Commissioners. In the first place, no reliance can be placed on "Family Returns" for the purpose of forming even a loose estimate of the number of children actually "attending school." Secondly, returns "furnished for a single day may be regarded as giving an exceedingly high average, or more than an average for a day's attendance, because the managers and masters of the various schools having had ample notice of the date for which the return was to be made," will, "in all probability" have "exerted themselves to procure a full attendance for that day." In other words, returns of attendance at school prepared upon family authority, as well as those furnished by managers or teachers of schools for a single day of which they have had ample notice beforehand, and for which they have had opportunity of procuring a special attendance, are equally untrustworthy.

This reference to the Educational Census of 1861 shows that there were three things to be carefully borne in mind in taking the enumeration of the children in primary schools for the purposes of the Royal Commission. In the first place, it was essential that the enumeration of attendance in the schools should be made through some responsible agency specially deputed for the purpose, and of whose impartiality there could be no suspicion.

One of the objections frequently made to the National Board's annual returns of "average attendances," is that they are not simple statements of facts, but compilations of inferences deduced from certain arithmetical data, and are consequently liable to the double error of mistakes of calculation, and of fallacious induction. It was of great consequence that those annual returns of average attendances should for once be confronted with an authentic return of actual attendances. This, however, implied as a necessary condition that such attendance should be reckoned by persons not only quite independent of the individual schools, but also unconnected with the National System of Education. This is the more plain, if one reflects that the attendance was to be reckoned, not only in National schools, but in all primary schools, of whatever kind, so that the whole value of any comparisons which may be founded upon the return of such attendance depends upon the recognised impartiality and independence of the machinery through which they shall have been collected. In other words the numbering of the children, to be really trustworthy, must be an act of personal observation of some impartial authority, wholly independent of all influences of managers, teachers, or parents.

In the second place it was also essential that this enumeration of attendance in the schools should be carried out rigidly by a simultaneous reckoning, otherwise it would be impossible to compare the numbers attending the different kinds of schools; but to secure a satisfactory result it was indispensable that the day chosen should not be one which could be generally, or even largely complained of as unsuitable for the purpose, as was the case with the time chosen for the first enumeration of school attendance in 1861. That is to say, it was essential to the fairness of the enumeration that the day selected for taking the actual attendance should be a day upon which a fair attendance of pupils might be generally expected.

* See Census, Part II., Vol. I., p. 22, passim.

† Ibid., p. 22.

There were, however, circumstances which facilitated the selection of the day. The schools of the National Board are not only the most numerous, but have also the largest proportion of scholars: moreover, they are spread all over the country. They exist in places where there is no other school; whereas in whatever localities other Societies or organizations possess schools, side by side with them are to be found the schools of the National Board. Hence the seasons or circumstances which would favour or diminish attendance in the National schools throughout the country, might safely be considered to affect in like manner all other primary schools of whatever kind. And yet there seemed to be but little room for choice. It was very desirable that the returns of attendance should be collected in sufficient time to allow them to be tabulated for the information of the Assistant Commissioners, in order to assist them in their inspection of the schools within their several districts. As the Royal Commissioners were desirous that this inspection should commence with the beginning of July, it was clear that the enumeration should take place sometime during the month of June. Fortunately the inquiries which were made at the Education Office in Marlborough-street, indicated that June could not be regarded as an unfavourable month for attendance; on the contrary, there was reason to believe that in three-fourths of the country the attendance during that month was usually above the average. It also appeared, through the same inquiries, that the day to be selected ought to be about the middle of a week, Mondays and Fridays being, commonly, days of bad attendance, and Saturdays being in most schools vacant days.

Preliminary to fixing definitively upon a day, it was necessary to arrange the form according to which the return of attendance should be compiled. This required very great consideration, in order to anticipate any possible errors into which the Constables might fall through misapprehension. When the form had at last been settled, it was necessary that a sufficient interval should be allowed before the day for taking the Census, in order to admit of the printing of the forms and their despatch to their several destinations.

The third lesson taught by the educational Census of 1861, was that the managers and teachers should not have notice beforehand of the day upon which the numbers of their scholars were to be reckoned, and consequently should not have an opportunity of exerting themselves "to procure a full attendance for that day." In order to prevent the possibility of any such fraudulent attempts to get up a fictitious attendance in the schools, every precaution was taken to secure secrecy as to the day fixed upon for the enumeration which was to be made under the authority of the Royal Commission. Following out the plan which had been suggested at the interview of Assistant Inspector-General Browne with the Commissioners, the day was privately arranged between the Chairman and the Inspector-General. No other persons were made aware of the date except Mr. Browning, the Chief Clerk of the Constabulary Office, and Mr. Dunne, the Secretary of this Commission. The packets enclosing the forms for despatch to the several Constabulary districts, were made up in the offices of the Commission, under the personal superintendence of Mr. Dunne. But he alone enclosed and sealed the circulars announcing the date. For greater security, and also to insure their confidential treatment, forms and circulars were enclosed in the official envelopes of the Constabulary office, and were forwarded to the Post Office from Dublin Castle, and not from the offices of the Commission.

In order to impress the more clearly on the Constables that the numbering of the children was but the completion of the work already partly accomplished by the enumeration of the schools, the forms, upon which the returns of attendance should be made, were of the same kind as those used on that occasion. Following the course then taken, two forms were issued:—one, Form No. III., upon which each enumerating Constable was directed to set down the desired information for the several schools assigned to his "beat;" the other, Form No. IV., was the same as Form No. III., only printed on a long sheet of paper, was to be used for the consolidation of the returns of the whole Constabulary district, as had been done in the enumeration of schools. This larger form, when completed and authenticated by the signature of the Sub-Inspector, was to be transmitted to the Secretaries, as the official return of the number of children in actual attendance in primary schools in Ireland, on 25th June, 1868.

Some little delay occurred in the transmission of the larger forms, No. IV.; but this was not of the slightest influence upon the accuracy of the enumeration. For, since the actual attendance in the several schools was to be set down by the enumerating Constables on the smaller form No. III., and the larger one was to be employed not for any original proceeding, but for consolidating the information collected by the local returns, any delay in the transmission of the former could not have a retrospective effect on the correctness of these latter. The delay, however, was but of a couple of days.

The following was the form on which the enumerating Constables made their several local returns:—

Together with the forms, a large number of copies of the following "Confidential Circular" and Memoranda, issued by the Inspector-General, were transmitted to the Sub-Inspectors, to be by them distributed among the Constables charged with the duty of taking the attendance:—

"Constabulary Office, Dublin Castle, 22nd June, 1868.

"The Royal Commissioners of Inquiry into the State of Primary Education in Ireland having obtained the sanction of Her Majesty's Government for the collection by the Royal Irish Constabulary of certain Statistical Returns connected with the Primary Schools in Ireland, the attention of the Officers and Men is particularly requested to the following Instructions:—

1. The completion of the Inquiry requires that on the same day (Thursday, 25th June), in every School throughout the country, the number of children should be exactly counted, and the Religious Denominations should be taken.

- "2. The Sub-Inspector is requested to furnish to each Constable in charge of a Sub-District as many copies of the enclosed Form No. III. as there were Schools enumerated in such Constable's previous Return (Form No. II.), already filled up and filed in the Office of the District; and he will direct the Constable to have the present Returns, No. III., correctly and carefully filled up and returned to him with as little delay as possible.
- "3. On the 15th June, the Constable in charge of each Sub-District, or the Man selected by the Sub-Inspector for the duty, will visit every Primary School within his Sub-District, and will personally count all the children present, and will enter the number of Boys, of Girls, and of Infants, in the proper column.
- "4. He will then ascertain the number of children of the Established Church, of the Roman Catholic children, of the Presbyterian children, and of the children of all other Denominations; and he will enter these respective numbers in the corresponding columns of the Returns.
- "5. One way in which this might be accomplished would be by the Constable asking the children of each Religious Denomination to severally hold up one hand, and then counting them. But the Constable will take such way of counting as he will consider in his discretion most trustworthy.
- "6. On receiving the Sub-District Returns, the Sub-Inspector will be good enough to have the information contained in them consolidated and entered on the large Return, Form No. IV., which is then to be forwarded to the Secretaries of the Royal Commission, 44, Upper Sackville-street, Dublin, in the enclosed printed envelope.
- "7. Should any more Returns of either Form III. or Form IV. be required, or should any further information be desired, a letter addressed to the Secretaries of the Royal Commission on Primary Education, 44, Upper Sackville-street, Dublin, will have immediate attention.
- "8. In filling up these Returns, it will be well to bear in mind that under the name of "Primary School" will be included the following classes of Schools:—
 - (a) All Schools for the Poor, of whatever kind.
 - (b) All National Schools.
 - (c) All Schools connected with the Church Education Society, the Christian Brothers, or similar bodies or institutions.
 - (d) All Schools, whether Private or Public, in which the course of instruction is similar to that followed in the National Schools.
- "9. In the last column the Constable will set down all information touching the School which has not been included under the preceding heads, and which he may deem useful.
- "10. The Returns from the Sub-Districts, on the Form No. III., will be filed and preserved for six months in the Office of the District, in order to facilitate further reference if necessary.
- "11. The Returns from the Sub-Districts on the Form No. II., which have been already completed and filed in the Office of the District, will continue to be preserved until the 31st December next, in order to facilitate further reference if necessary.

"J. STEWART WOOD, Inspector-General."

"Constabulary Office, Dublin Castle, 22nd June, 1868.

"MEMORANDUM.

"I have to direct the special attention of the County and Sub-Inspectors to the Confidential Circular of this date, headed 'Primary Education Inquiry,' and to beg that the greatest pains may be taken, by the selection of suitable men to discharge the duty in question, to ensure the enumeration being made faithfully and accurately, as particularly desired by Her Majesty's Government.

"J. STEWART WOOD, Inspector-General, Royal Irish Constabulary."

"Constabulary Office, Dublin Castle, 26th June, 1868.

"Owing to an unforeseen delay, the large District Form, No. IV. (to which the separate Returns collected in the Sub-Districts, and entered on the smaller Form, No. III., will be transferred), cannot be made ready for transmission on the present occasion.

"This, however, will not cause any inconvenience in making the enumeration required. The requisite number of copies of Form No. III., which are herewith forwarded, will be distributed through the Sub-Districts, and the enumeration will be punctually made upon the day already fixed in the Confidential Circular.

"In two or three days the necessary copies of the large Form, No. IV., will be sent; and then the Sub-District Returns can be transferred and consolidated upon them, as described in the Confidential Circular.

"In all other respects the instructions contained in the Confidential Circular will be carefully complied with.

"Particular attention is directed to the necessity of keeping strict secrecy as to the day fixed upon for making the enumeration of the Children present in the several Schools.

"J. STEWART WOOD, Inspector-General, Royal Irish Constabulary."

The "Dublin Metropolitan Police District," comprising the city of Dublin and the south-eastern portion of the county as far as Dalkey, does not come within the jurisdiction of the Inspector-General of Constabulary, but is subject to the Commissioners of Metropolitan Police. Arrangements were concerted with one of those gentlemen, Colonel Attwell Lake, for having the Educational Census taken within the Metropolitan district by the men under his command. In this way was secured that the enumeration throughout the whole of Ireland should be perfectly simultaneous, as well as made by an independent and responsible authority—conditions hitherto wanting in all attempts of the kind. The Returns came in with the most satisfactory promptness. Those for 192 districts reached the office by the morning of the 30th June, that is within five days from the taking the Census. All with a single exception were received by the 13th July.

The preparation of the Returns for the Metropolitan districts was a very heavy task. The enumeration of schools, which had been performed by the Constabulary in April for all the rest of the country, had to be made by the Dublin Police for the Metropolitan district, simultaneously with the operation of counting the children in attendance. Then all the information thus collected had to be transcribed and consolidated upon the large Forms I. and IV. already described. Notwithstanding the complexity and voluminous nature of the information, the Returns for the Metropolitan district, comprising 397 schools, were forwarded to the offices of the Commission on the 3rd July, only a week after the Census.

According as the Returns had been received they were copied exactly, and then printed. The proofs were carefully compared with the original Returns. They were next examined for the purpose of tracing any errors which, from one cause or another, might have crept into the Returns themselves. One or two examples will explain the nature and object of this operation.

Two of the Royal Commissioners had, at the request of their colleagues, undertaken to visit and examine the several Model Schools, and, as far as time would permit, all conventual schools which might be in existence in places where Model Schools were established. In the discharge of this duty they visited Galway early in July, 1868. Among the convent schools in that city connected with the National Board, there is one in the well-known suburb, the Claddagh, conducted by the Sisters of Mercy. This school figured in the Board's list of schools as a "Mixed" school, that is one in which there were children of different religions. Struck by the strange fact—if fact it really was—that a school taught by nuns should have Protestant pupils, and this in a place where there was abundant denominational provision made for them, the Royal Commissioners considered it a duty to visit this school. Upon inquiry it turned out that over a year before ONE child, a member of the Established Church, had been entered upon the rolls of the school. She made a solitary attendance on the day upon which her name was entered, and never came again. Yet the application of the rigorous logic of the Board's rules instantly stamped the school as a "Mixed School" for two years.*

Upon their return to Dublin the Commissioners asked for the Galway Police Return of the Census. They had made a point of reckoning the children present in the several schools which they visited; and they wished to see whether the numbers set down in the Return as having been counted by the Constable on the 25th June differed materially from their own reckoning. But, while the number corresponded almost identically, they were amazed at finding that the Constable had set down as actually present on the

* There could not be a clearer illustration of the incoherence of the rule referred to. This solitary child who made one appearance, figured for thirteen weeks as one of the regular pupils of the school. In making the summary of the rolls for the year, she was again reckoned as one of the pupils in virtue of her single appearance. Her name appearing on the rolls at the end of 1868 as a pupil of the year, it was entered afresh on those for 1869; and did not disappear until the April of this latter year. Nay, the exactness which compels this most delicate return is such, that the number of pupils for 1869 will have been swollen by this imaginary one, who never crossed the threshold since the early part of 1868.

25th of June one "Established Church" child. Now, they had been told at the school that this child had attended only once, and that a long time previously. It was plain that either the Constable had not himself counted the children, but had been content to take his information at second hand, or else that the Nun who gave the information about this solitary Protestant child to the Commissioners had grossly misrepresented matters. It was clearly necessary to have the matter cleared up at once. Accordingly the following letter was written to the Sub-Inspector in charge of the Galway Constabulary District:—

"Royal Commission of Primary Education,
"Office, 44, Sackville-street, Upper,
"Dublin, 6th July, 1868.

"Sir,—Will you ascertain from the Constable who took the numbers on the 25th June at the Claddagh National school under the Sisters of Mercy, and the Claddagh National Piousery school, whether he actually himself counted the children present, or whether he took the numbers from the teachers?

"Your obedient servant,
(Signed), "D. B. DUNNE, Secretary.

"Sub-Inspector Cullen, Galway."

To this letter the following answer was received:—

"Galway, 7th July, 1868.

"Sir,—In reply to your communication of the 6th inst., I have to state that the Sub-Constable who took the numbers on the 25th June last, at the Claddagh National school under the Sisters of Mercy, did not count the children, but took the numbers from the Sisters of Mercy, he counted the boys at the Claddagh National Piousery school, about which you also required information.

"I have the honour to be, sir, your obedient servant, (Signed), "FRANCIS N. CULLEN, First Sub-Inspector Royal Irish Constabulary.

"D. B. DUNNE, esq., Secretary."

It was necessary to bring to the notice of the Inspector-General this plain disregard of No. 3 of the instructions given above (page 14). This was done by the following letter:—

"Office of Royal Commission of Primary Education,
"46, Sackville-street, Upper,
"Dublin, 8th July, 1868.

"Sir,—I have been directed by the Royal Commissioners of Inquiry into the state of Primary Education in Ireland to forward to you copies (enclosed) of a correspondence which we have had with Sub-Inspector Cullen of Galway.

"This correspondence arose out of a remarkable discrepancy between the numbers returned as having been present in those schools on the 25th June last, and the numbers observed by some of the Commissioners on the occasion of a visit to the schools a few days later.

"It is scarcely necessary to point out to you that the fact of the constable taking the numbers of the children from any person instead of counting them himself quite frustrates in the case of those schools the object the Royal Commissioners proposed to themselves in instituting this enumeration. They no longer have the independent personal guarantee of the officers of the Constabulary as to the number of children actually present on the 25th June last.

"I remain, Sir, your obedient servant, (Signed), "D. B. DUNNE.

"To Colonel J. Stewart Wood, C.B.,
"Inspector-General Royal Irish Constabulary,
"Dublin Castle."

The following letters tell their own story:—

"Constabulary Office, Dublin Castle,
"9th July, 1868.

"Sir,—I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of yesterday's date, from which I discover with much regret that the sub-constable who took the numbers of the children at the Claddagh National school neglected to attend to the clear instructions issued at your instance in that regard; and I have to state for the information of the Commissioners of Primary Education Inquiry, that I shall institute further inquiry into the case, and deal with it as the result of that inquiry shall indicate. And I beg you will say to the Commissioners that should they wish that any other steps be taken in the matter I shall be happy to carry them out.

"I have the honour to be, Sir,
"Your obedient servant,
(Signed), "J. STEWART WOOD,

"Inspector-General, Constabulary.

"The Secretary, Primary Education Commission, &c., &c.,
"46, Sackville-street, Upper."

"Constabulary Office, Dublin Castle,
"15th July, 1868.

"SIR,—Referring to your letter of the 6th instant, I beg to transmit the accompanying file that the Commissioners may see the steps taken to punish the neglect complained of, and have to request that you will be good enough to return it at your earliest convenience.

"I am, sir, your obedient servant,
(Signed), "J. STEWART WOOD,
"Inspector-General.

"D. B. DUNNE, esq., Secretary Primary Education Commission,
"16, Backville-street, Upper."

"Office of Primary Education Commission,
"16th July, 1868.

"SIR,—We are directed by the Royal Commissioners of Inquiry into Primary Education in Ireland to acknowledge the receipt of your communication, dated 15th instant, enclosing file of correspondence relative to the case of sub-constable — of the Calway district, and which we have the honour to return herewith.

"We are instructed to say that the Commissioners in returning the file of papers to the Inspector-General trust that he will give all the consideration in his power to the recommendation of the County Inspector favourable to sub-constable — in consideration of his previous good character.

"We have the honour to be, sir, your obedient servants, (Signed), "GEORGE A. G. MAY,
"D. B. DUNNE.

"Colonel J. Stewart Wood, c.b.
"Inspector-General, Royal Irish Constabulary,
"Dublin Castle."

The file of papers which accompanied the preceding letter included a strongly worded minute by the Inspector-General, directing a charge to be preferred against the Constable for his misconduct, and calling upon the Sub-Inspector for an explanation of his conduct in the transaction. It appeared from the other papers of the file that the Sub-Inspector in order to call special attention to the importance of the matter, had marked with the letter "A" the 3rd section of the confidential circular given above, which contained the direction to personally count the children. The Constable had no alternative but to admit the charge of having disobeyed the instruction, pleading however that he "did not do it wilfully." Having been "called on for any explanation he may have to offer," the Constable stated that he had never before been at a convent school, and the Ardagh school of the Sisters of Mercy was the first one visited by him on the day of taking the census. He continues:—"The scholars were playing at the time, and I thought that they may not all be there, so I asked one of the nuns how many scholars were in the school on that day, and she told me 194, and then I was bashful to ask her to call them in till I count them myself, as I thought she told me the proper number."

When returning the file of papers, the Commissioners expressed their trust that the Inspector-General would "give all the consideration in his power to the recommendation of the County Inspector, favourable to" the Constable "in consideration of his previous good character." The following letter will explain how the affair terminated.

"Constabulary Office, Dublin Castle,
"17th July, 1868.

"GENTLEMEN,—Referring to your communication of the 16th instant, returning the file of papers relating to sub-constable —, and interceding for leniency in dealing with his case, I have to inform you in reply that although the very serious neglect of duty of which the sub-constable has been guilty deserves dismissal, yet, that taking into consideration the recommendation of the Royal Commissioners, and his previous unblemished character, the Inspector-General has only imposed on him a fine of one pound.

"I am, gentlemen, your obedient servant,
(Signed), "G. E. HILLIER,
"Deputy Inspector-General.

"Messrs. G. A. G. May and D. B. Dunne, Joint Secretaries,
"Royal Commission of Primary Education,
"48, Backville-street, Upper."

His Sub-Inspector and County Inspector reported his "previous conduct very good"; and the latter begged the Inspector-General's "merciful consideration for this good man."

Scattered inquiries which were made personally in various parts of the country by some of the Royal Commissioners and others, showed that the Cliddagh case stood alone, and that there was no reason for suspecting that in any other instance the constables, through "bashfulness" or any other cause were induced to forego a personal reckoning of the children, and to take the numbers upon the report of other persons.

A curious circumstance occurred with regard to one group of schools, which illustrates not only the difficulty of taking a satisfactory educational census, but also other matters bearing upon the relations of the State and the clergy towards education. In all the Roman Catholic primary schools, within the Roman Catholic parish of Blackrock, Booterstown, and Dundrum (near Dublin), the Constables were refused permission to ascertain the religion of the children. In each school the teacher stated that the Manager had given orders to this effect. The Manager of all those schools was practically the Very Rev. Canon Forde, D.D., the parish priest of the district, and Vicar-General of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Dublin.

The constables were obliged to content themselves with counting the children actually present in those schools at the time of their visit. The return states, "Religion of pupils refused."

These facts having been brought under the notice of the Royal Commission, the following letter was addressed to the Secretaries of the National Board.

"Office of Primary Education Commission,
"July 10th, 1868.

"GENTLEMEN,—We have been instructed by the Royal Commissioners to state for the information of the Commissioners of National Education that on the occasion of making an enumeration of the children actually present at school on the 25th ult., the enumerating Constable was refused the religion of the children in the schools given in the accompanying schedule.

"The Royal Commissioners request us to request that you will be so good as to ascertain through the District Inspector the religion of the children actually present in attendance in those schools on that day—25th June last.

"We remain, gentlemen, your obedient servants, (Signed), "GEORGE A. C. MAY, } Secretaries.

"D. B. DUNNE, }

"The Secretaries National Education Board,
"Mallborough-street."

With their answer to this letter, the Secretaries of the Board forwarded the following communication from the Inspector within whose district those schools were situated:—

"District 38.

"July 20th, 1868.

"GENTLEMEN,—I enclose the returns of the attendance in the Blackrock, Booterstown female, and Killybegan schools, on the 25th ultimo. The Constabulary return for the Blackrock schools is incorrect. It gives only sixty as the attendance in the infants' school on that day, whereas the real attendance was 151. It also gives forty-five as the attendance in the male school, whereas it was eighty-four. It gives eighty for the female school, whereas it was seventy-three. The teachers inform me that they do not know how the police got the returns, as in those schools the information sought for was refused by the direction of the Manager, Very Rev. Canon Forde. The policeman called about a quarter past ten, an hour at which few schools in the city or county are assembled. To have the full school they should have waited till eleven.

"I am, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

(Signed), "F. F. O'CARROLL, District Inspector.

"To the Secretaries."

The last remark in the letter of District Inspector O'Carroll, might at first appear to discredit the accuracy of the reckoning of the Constabulary. But further consideration will show that this is not the case. The Constables went into the schools, as any other persons might have done in accordance with the Board's rules (Part I., Sect. viii., 1), "during the hours devoted to secular instruction." If it happened that a majority of the children, who would be entered in the attendance book as present on the 25th June, 1868, was absent at the time of the constables' visit, this only proves the irregularity of practice as to attendance which prevails in National schools. The entry of attendance on a particular day, is no guarantee as to the time during which an individual child may have been actually present in the school on that day.

From the rapidity with which the Returns were prepared and forwarded to the office, it was natural to expect that errors of detail should have crept in. The following classes of cases include all the most important errors.

- I. Schools omitted in the Census of attendance which had been returned upon Form I., of the enumeration of the schools.

- II. Schools returned in the Census of attendance which were not mentioned in Form I, of the enumeration of the schools.
- III. Wrong description of schools, e.g.
 - (a) Schools in connexion with the National Board returned as being not so connected.
 - (b) Schools not in connexion with the National Board returned as being in connexion.
 - (c) Church Education or other classes of schools returned as private schools, &c.
- IV. Wrong return of Religious Denominations, such as putting the return of the number of Roman Catholics in the column for Presbyterians, or vice versa.
- V. Describing a girl's school as a "mixed school" because of the presence of some male infants.
- VI. Entry of "boys" in the column for "girls," or vice versa.
- VII. Mistaking one number for another.
- VIII. Setting down schools as having some endowment, or receiving aid of some kind, which were not so aided, and the contrary.

The mistakes included under categories III., IV., VI. and VII., arose in almost every case during the consolidation of the Local Returns (Form III.) upon the large District Return (Form IV.). The person employed in each district in doing this work had the entries in the former read out to him as he wrote, and may have easily misplaced an entry horizontally or vertically, or mistaken one number for another similar to it in sound.

The Returns concerning the Census have been printed in the form in which they were supplied by the Constabulary. They have not been re-arranged according to any order, as it was considered advisable that the information should be given to the public in the exact way in which it was communicated to the Commission. In order to bring the information contained in the District Tables within the size when set up in type of a page of this volume, a number of abbreviations had to be made. During the preparation in this way of the Returns for the press many of the errors above referred to were detected. Some of these errors were very trifling, and were capable of being easily and safely corrected in the office of the Commission. When this could not be done with certainty or whenever there was any doubt as to the correctness of a Return, a communication was at once addressed to the Sub-Inspector of the District calling his attention to the error, and requesting its correction. As was naturally to be expected new errors crept in during the preparation of the Census for the press. These errors which we may call office errors are all embraced under the same categories as the original errors. When the whole of the Census was set up in type and revised from the original Returns the preparation of the Summary and Analytical Tables commenced. In the progress of this work the Census underwent a thorough revision, and most of the original errors which had escaped observation previously as well as the new or office ones which had crept in were detected. The errors thus discovered were corrected in the same way as before. When the means for their correction were within the reach of those engaged in preparing the tables, they were corrected, otherwise a communication was addressed to the Sub-Inspector on the subject. The correspondence relating to the correction of errors from first to last extended over a long period, and, with the exception of a few which were detected in making the School Index, which we shall refer to hereafter, it is believed that this Census is free from important errors, and certainly from mistakes arising from causes within the control of the Constabulary or Police.

As most of the errors, whether made in taking the Census or in preparing and printing the Returns, have been it is believed eliminated, it is not necessary to discuss them further, except so far as some of them may present special interest either in connexion with the general question of education, or with the Summary and Analytical Tables. In noticing such exceptional cases, we shall follow the order laid down above.

I. Schools omitted in the Census of ATTENDANCE, which had been returned upon Form I.—Five causes may be assigned for the omission in the Returns of Attendance of Schools mentioned in Form I.—1. The omitted schools may have been entered upon Form I under another name; 2, they may have been left out because the constables found them closed; 3, they may have been omitted through oversight of the constables; 4, they may have been given up in the interval; or, 5, because they were found to be Secondary or Intermediate Schools. The first cause need not be noticed, but the number of cases accounted for by the second cause affords, to some extent, a criterion of the probable error in this Census, arising from omission of schools; while the number of cases accounted for by the third gives us a glimpse of the changes which take place in the course of a couple of months in the localities of schools. The following table gives the number of schools returned on Form I and omitted on Form IV., arranged according to counties and provinces, and classified according to causes of omission:—

TABLE showing the Number of Schools returned in Form I., which were omitted or appeared under other names in Form IV.

Of the 13 schools discontinued, according to the foregoing Table, 4 were National Schools, 1 Church Education, and 8 Private.

II. Schools which were returned in the Census of Attendance, but which were not mentioned in the Enumeration of Schools.—The appearance of schools in the Census of attendance which were not mentioned in the first returns (Form I.) may be accounted for chiefly by:—1, oversight or the discovery of schools which escaped notice the first time; and 2, the setting up of new schools. The number of cases under the first head serve to show, like those under the third cause assigned above for the omission of schools in Form IV. which were in Form I., the extent to which returns like those of the present Census made by the Constabulary themselves may be relied upon for completeness; while those under the second head give us further information of the same kind as those under the fourth cause in the preceding table, namely, as to the growth of schools and the change in the localities of school-houses. The following table gives the number of schools returned in Form IV. which were not enumerated in Form I., arranged and classified as in the preceding table:—

Errors arising from the Description of Schools.—The observations which we propose to make under this head have chiefly reference to the principles upon which the schools in the Summary and Analytical Tables were grouped together.

In making out the Summary of Convent Schools, some difficulty was experienced in determining under which of the heads the several Convent Schools should be placed, namely, "Convent National," if the schools were in connexion with the National Board, and "Convent not National," if the schools were unconnected with the National Board. Several Convent Schools, which at one time received aid from the National Board, and then ceased to be connected with that Body, were still locally reputed to be National Schools. A few of those schools were, accordingly, returned as National Schools. A further difficulty arose when the schools of the Marist Brothers came to be dealt with. It should be stated here that the term "Convent Schools" is popularly applied to schools conducted by religious orders of women; but in the sense in which it is used by the Board of Education, and in the Summary Tables, it includes a few schools conducted by a religious order of men; because the rules under which aid is granted to the few Monks' Schools, which still remain in connexion with the Board of Education, are the same as those under which it is granted to Nuns' Schools. It appeared scarcely proper to include the Marist Schools referred to, in which a higher education is sometimes given, along with the ordinary schools. A new column, "Religious Orders," was accordingly introduced into the Summary Tables. Under this head are placed the Marist Schools, in Louth, St. Joseph's Blind Asylum, and St. Mary's Asylum, Dublin, for Industrial teaching only; the Cabra Deaf and Dumb School, the Inchicore School, under the Oblate Fathers, one school in Kerry under the Dominican Fathers, and the St. Vincent de Paul's Schools, Waterford. These schools have been classed together, not because they have much in common, that would naturally bring them under one head, but because they have a certain common religious character, and differ in some respects from ordinary schools.

With regard to Convent Schools, it may still further be observed that some difficulty arose from the fact that certain Convents, and notably those of the Loretto Order, have two classes of Schools, namely, Intermediate or Superior Schools for Ladies, and Poor Schools. The Census in many cases failed to distinguish between them, and it was only from other sources that it could be ascertained whether the school given in the Census belonged to the Primary or Intermediate class. Thus, the Loretto School, Stephen's-green, is described (p. 112, No. 220), as "Loretto Day," a name which might properly belong either to a Ladies' or a Poor School. In this particular instance, a reference to the Report of the National Board showed that the Poor School was not meant, as the latter is in connexion with the National Board, and is returned as the Leeson-lane National Girls' School in the Census (p. 111, No. 211). The Loretto Day School was accordingly included in the list of "Schools not Primary."

Some schools that have been included in the list of "Convent not National," presented difficulties of another kind, as, for instance, the St. Bridgid's Catholic School in Crow-street (p. 113, No. 252), and St. Brigid's School, Great Strand-street (p. 113, No. 275). Nothing could be ascertained about these schools from the usual sources as to whether they should be classed as ordinary poor schools or as Convent schools. In these cases, and in others of a similar kind, the text of the Census was followed, which gives the Crow-street School as under some Society or Order of St. Bridgid, and Strand-street School as under the Sisters of Holy Faith, which is apparently only another name for the Order of St. Bridgid, although the existence of such an Order in Dublin is not generally known.

Some schools, which in the Census appear peculiar, have not in the Summary Tables been included under a peculiar heading. Thus, the Trinity Church School, Lower Gardiner-street (p. 113, No. 260), has been referred to the head "Private Assisted," although from the Census it appears to be under some special government. The Smithfield Prison School (p. 115, No. 362) and the Drummond Institution (p. 115, No. 367) have been placed under the head "Miscellaneous," to which reference will be presently made. The first, although not a National school, is visited and reported on by the Inspectors of the National Board. The second is a special institution for the daughters of soldiers, and properly comes under the head "Miscellaneous."

The schools grouped under the head "Not Primary" in Tables V. and VI. ought not to have been included at all in the Returns; but, having been once included, they could not conveniently be left out in the Summary Tables. They are most of them outside of Dublin, and include several schools managed and taught by clergymen, which perform the functions of Diocesan Seminaries. Although elementary instruction is given in them, and they so far perform the functions of Primary schools, they are, strictly speaking, Grammar Schools, in which instruction in Latin, Greek, and Mathematics is regularly given. The schools of this group in Dublin are for the most part under the management of Religious Orders; several are, however, private schools, in which Classics, French, Music, &c., are taught.

Generally speaking, a school in this Census means a school-house; but there are some important exceptions. Thus, the Central Model School in Dublin is returned as eleven distinct schools, while in the Report of the National Board it is divided into ten departments. The Model School at Belfast has been returned by the Constabulary as one school; whereas in the classification of the National Board it is made up of four distinct schools. In the same way the large establishments of the Christian Brothers appear in the returns as single schools, although in truth they are distinct schools, carried on within the same building. The tables include returns for twenty-one Convent Schools in Dublin; whereas in the Report of the Commissioners of National Education the number of Convent Schools in connexion with the Board is given as fifteen. This discrepancy is explained by the fact that in the Census the Baggot-street Convent, for instance, is returned as having seven National Schools under it—each class in fact being returned as a separate school. It was deemed better not to disturb those arrangements, either in the case of the Baggot-street, King's Inns-street, or George's-hill schools, as it was considered that the information was worth having in the form presented by the Police, and that the inconvenience, if any, arising from this arrangement, could be remedied by a note like the present. In making out the average attendance, however, the Baggot-street and George's-hill Convent schools are each considered as a single school, and the Central Model School as ten schools.

Of the categories of errors enumerated above, those under III. were found to be the most numerous. Hence in drawing up the table (VIII. p. xlv.) of boys', girls', and infant schools, regard was necessarily had rather to the nature of the attendance in each case than to the description contained in the Returns, and the schools classed according as the character of the school was determined by the presence of male, female, or infant pupils. Some schools that were returned in the Census as "boys'" or "girls'," and which had a mixed attendance of boys and girls, are returned as mixed; and so also some are returned as infants' that are described in the returns as "boys and girls." The rule followed was that where the attendance was exclusively of one kind, the school was returned as of that kind; where the attendance was mixed, the school was returned as mixed, even though put down in the Returns as "boys'," "girls'," or "infants'." Thus, in the case of Antrim, only six schools were specially returned as infant schools, while following the rule just stated the number should be twelve, because in twelve schools the attendance consisted of infants only on the day of visit. In order, however, to make the Summaries and Returns harmonize as much as possible, every discrepancy of the kind just stated, as well as any other discrepancy or supposed error was, as we have already stated, referred back to the Constabulary. In no case was any attempt made to correct the returns in important matters of this kind in the office of the Commissioners; as now printed, the returns accordingly correspond with the summary in Table VIII. constructed upon the principle above stated.

A glance at the attendance of children in Irish Primary Schools, as given in the Census, will at once show that, except in a few cities and large towns, there is no room for schools specially set apart for infants in Ireland. Outside the Model Schools, and some of the larger towns, they are not known. Indeed the term "infant" has not in Ireland the definite technical meaning which it has in the English educational system. The return of infants is probably therefore much below the truth; so that it would have been better perhaps if a separate column for infants had not been introduced into Form IV. at all. On the other hand, from what we have said above, we may look upon the schools returned as having an attendance of infants only on the 25th June, 1868, as being practically if not strictly infant schools. Table VIII. may therefore be considered to fairly represent the relative numbers of separate male, female, and infant schools, and of mixed schools, that is, schools attended by both boys and girls.

The absence of any uniform principle as regards the classification of infants, by which the constabulary might be guided, affected the description of schools in another way. In many cases schools are returned as "boys' schools," even where there are more girls than boys, and vice versa; thereby showing that the character of a school was not supposed to be affected by the presence of infants of a different sex from what the school was designed to accommodate. For the sake of uniformity, and to make the Summaries really represent what appeared on the face of the Census, the rule was adopted of classing the schools in this respect according to the description given of them by those who made the Returns.

Whilst in general it may be said that the Returns of National, Church Education, and Convent Schools were made upon definite and uniform principles, it is to be feared that the same observation does not apply to the "Private assisted" and "Private unassisted" schools. Indeed it must be obvious to any person who peruses the Census that in some cases the heading, "if maintained by private individuals," was taken to include the maintenance by the fees of scholars, whereas it really was intended to ascertain the number of cases in which contributions, independent of fees, were made for the support of the teachers by the landlord, the parish, or out of some more general fund. The consequence has been that whilst reliance may be placed upon the number of schools returned as "unassisted," none, or very little, can be attached to the column of "assisted schools." Although it is certain that in a great proportion of cases the heading "maintained by private individuals" was interpreted in the sense already referred to, and in a large number of cases a special note was added to signify the source of such aid, yet it is more than doubtful whether the large number of schools returned in the Summaries as "assisted" ought to be regarded in the light of aided schools. Still it was thought right to preserve the distinction for the sake of the return of "unassisted schools," which appears to be sufficiently reliable, and also because the return of "assisted schools," if not accurate, will supply data for conjecture that would not exist if the two classes of schools had been included in the same Summary.

This is perhaps the best place to make some further observations on the class of schools grouped together in the Summary Table III. under the head "private unassisted." Many of these private adventure schools were described in the Constabulary Returns as "Hedge Schools." In page 164 of the Census it is said that all the private schools of the district of Kilfinnane in the county of Limerick are of this class. In some cases, as in the instance just referred to, this description was printed, but in perhaps the majority of cases it was unfortunately not. The term "Hedge School" did not necessarily imply originally any intellectual or literary incapacity of the teacher for his office, but merely that owing to the legal disabilities of Roman Catholics the school could only be kept in some miserable cabin in winter, and under a hedge or other sheltered place in fine weather. Fifty years ago, several masters of "Hedge Schools" in the south of Ireland enjoyed considerable local reputation as classical and mathematical scholars. On the establishment of the National System of Education the more competent of the "Hedge" schoolmasters received salaries from the National Board, and their "Hedge Schools" were transformed into National Schools, the mud cabins being gradually, though not yet entirely, replaced by slated stone-built school-houses. Yet, notwithstanding the growth of National and other schools in which the school fee is not more than one penny a week, and the payment of even this small fee is not always enforced, the Constabulary have returned under the name of "Hedge Schools" 117 schools in Munster, 43 Leinster, and 44 Connaught, and in all Ireland 207 schools, the teachers of which depend for their livelihood on school fees. Whatever may have been the character of the original schools known under the designation of "Hedge Schools," there can be no doubt that the term now implies incapacity in the teacher as well as unsuitness in the school-house.

In consequence of the omission from the printed Census in so many cases of the word "Hedge School," we think it desirable to preserve so curious an educational record, and give accordingly in the following table a list of all the schools described in the District Returns of the Constabulary as Hedge Schools, and the attendance at each on the 23rd of June, 1868.

It will be seen from this list that the term "Hedge School" has been applied to city and town schools as well as to rural schools. This extended application of the term explains the sense in which it is now to be understood. With the exception of three in the county of Cavan, no "Hedge Schools" are returned for Ulster. The term was never however much used in the north of Ireland, and consequently fell into desuetude there more rapidly than in Munster. Whilst the use of the term "Hedge School" leaves no room for doubt as to the kind of school meant, the term "Private" affords no information as to the character of the school-house, or the capacity of the teacher. It is probable therefore that many of the Private schools in Ulster might be truly described as "Hedge Schools," and that the foregoing list does not contain all of the Private schools which ought to be included in the same category. As the list stands it informs us of the curious fact that 177 per cent. of the Primary schools not aided by the State, or under the management of Public Bodies, could be still described in 1868 as "Hedge Schools," and that there are still some poor people willing to pay for the education of their children, even where facilities are offered of obtaining a much superior education gratuitously in National and other schools.

Summary and Analytical Tables.—After what has been said above respecting the Summary and Analytical Tables in connexion with the correction of the errors of the Census, we need not say much more in explanation of those tables. Indeed, with the exception of the column "Others" in Tables III. and IV., the analysis of it in Tables V.

and VI., and Table XVI., to which reference will be made further on, the Summary Tables require no special description.

A glance at the list of abbreviations used in the eighth column of the Educational Census Returns, p. liii., will show the impossibility of giving separate columns in Tables III. and IV. to each class of school named in the Returns. Some of these classes comprise not more than half a dozen schools. All schools not coming under the heads "National," "Convent," "Church Education," "Christian Brothers," and "Private," were accordingly included under the head "Others" in Table III., and the attendance at them in Table IV. Table V. gives an analysis of the classes thus grouped together, and Table VI. gives a corresponding analysis of the attendance. So numerous are the classes of schools included under the head "Others," that a separate column could not be given to each even in the special Analytical Tables V. and VI., and it was accordingly found necessary to group a number of schools under the head "Miscellaneous." This group comprehends some schools under the management of the War Office, others under the Irish Relief Society, and generally such as are managed by a special body, but are so few that even were it possible to give to each a distinct column it would not be worth while doing so.

Out of the 8,627 schools visited, or attempted to be visited, by the Constabulary and Police for the purpose of counting the children present, no returns of attendance were obtained from 577 schools. This number, forming 6.6 per cent. of the whole, gives us the number of schools inoperative on the 25th of June, 1868. Does this number represent the average number of schools inoperative throughout the year, or an approximation to it? This is a very important question, but one which we have no data to enable us to answer. It seemed, however, desirable to analyse the causes assigned by the Constables for the several schools being closed, and to give in a table the number of schools under each head. Table VII. gives the result of this inquiry. In order not to multiply too much the number of headings, a column headed "Closed, various causes," was introduced. Under this head are included 89 schools, of which 39 were in Connaught, 24 in Ulster, 21 in Munster, and 14 in Leinster. In the majority of these cases the cause assigned was the holding of a fair in the neighbourhood of the school, which prevented the attendance of the children. In a few cases the cause assigned was the attendance of the children at the Roman Catholic church, or that they were being prepared for confirmation. The teachers were found to be absent in twenty schools, in some cases without any cause being assigned, and in others an explanation is added that he was attending Quarter Sessions, or at chapel. It was not deemed necessary to introduce a column for each of these separate reasons, and as the general principles upon which the table was constructed is sufficiently apparent from what we have just said, there will be no difficulty in distinguishing the individual instances in case they should be required by anyone making use of the Census for statistical purposes.

So much importance is attached to the question of how far the Primary Schools in Ireland, especially those under the National Board, have a mixed attendance, that is, are attended by children of different religious denominations, and how far they are denominational, that is, attended by children of one religious denomination only, that it was deemed desirable to prepare an analytical table, for the purpose of showing the number of schools attended by children of one religious denomination only, and of those attended by persons of different religious denominations. Grouping the different denominations of Presbyterians under the one head of "Presbyterians," and all other Dissenters under the head of "Others," we get four denominational elements of mixture or combination, which are found to give rise to eleven different mixtures. Thus, Roman Catholics and Episcopalian Protestants attend the same schools in some places; Episcopalian Protestants and Presbyterians in others, and so on—or, in other words, any two, any three, or all four, may mix in the same school. The extent of this variable mixture is fully shown in Table IX.

A National School attended by Roman Catholic children would be made a "mixed school" for one year, in the sense in which the word "mixed" is used, to indicate that the children attending a given school belong to different religious denominations by a single attendance of a Protestant child. As we have seen in the instance of the Galway Convent School, it might be thus made in exceptional cases a mixed school even for two years. In the same way a Protestant school might be made a mixed school by a single attendance of a Roman Catholic child. It is plain, therefore, that the relative proportions of the different religious denominations which make up the mixed attendance of "mixed" schools should always be given, as nothing can be more fallacious than a bare statement of the number of mixed and unmixed schools, without any indication of the character and proportions of the elements which constitute the "mixture." In the analytical Table XI. all the schools in connexion with the National Board having a mixed attendance are divided into two groups, according as the minority consists of Protestants or of Catholics; the schools of each group are there classified according to the number of children forming the minority. Tables XII. XIII. give the schools of the Church Education Society, and of the Board of Erasmus Smith respectively classified in the same way; and Table XIV. all other schools not belonging to either of the preceding categories.

In making up the Summary Table of attendance six schools in Sligo,—five National Schools, and one Church Education School; two Church Education Schools in Roscommon; and two Incorporated Society's Schools in Tipperary were struck out, because the returns were made from an average supplied either by the managers or teachers and not from personal observations.

Alphabetical Index of Schools.—The returns having been printed, as we have already stated, in the form in which they were supplied by the Constabulary, and without arranging them in any order which would facilitate reference, it was deemed necessary to append an Alphabetical Index of the schools enumerated in the Census, arranged according to localities. Without this Index the Census itself would have been deprived of much of its utility, by reason of the difficulty of searching out in the Census a school the particulars of which it might be desired to investigate.

This is the first attempt, so far as is known, to compile a Primary School Index. It is needless to say that, while its compilation has been beset with much difficulty, it does not pretend to be perfect. Indeed a very slight consideration of the materials available will satisfy anyone that the preparation from them of a complete Index was an impossibility.

The schools have been placed in the alphabetical order of the localities where the Constabulary reported they were held. It was soon found that in many cases these reported localities were the townlands in which the schools were held, while the actual place of the school bore a different name. Thus, "Parkgrove" is the name of a townland in the parish of Aharney, barony of Galinoy, county of Kilkenny. The Constabulary have returned Parkgrove as the locality of two National schools; but the place where these schools are held is properly the village of Ballyragget, which is within the townland of Parkgrove, and the schools are actually known as the Ballyragget National Schools. In the same way Ballycatters, a townland in the parish of Templetrine, barony of Courcy, and county of Cork, was reported as the locality of two schools which are usually known by the name of Ballinspittle Schools, from a village of that name within the townland where the schools are held.

Obviously, were the Index to mention only the names of the townlands given by the Constabulary as the places where those schools were held, persons even most familiarly acquainted with the schools might fail to recognise them. Hence it has been thought well to give both sets of names—as well that of the locality reported by the Constabulary, as that of the actual place in connexion with which the school is commonly known. Ballyragget, therefore, will be found in the Index as well as Parkgrove, and Ballinspittle as well as Ballycatters.

But the references to the place in the Census where the details of information connected with the schools will be found is only given in connexion with the name of the locality returned by the Constabulary, and a reference to the Constabulary name is made when the more usual name is given. Thus, at the name Ballymaggett will be found "see Parkagrove," at Ballinspittle will be found "see Ballycateen; and in connexion with the names Parkagrove and Ballycateen will be found the references to those places in the Census where the details of information concerning these schools are given.

A further column in the Index gives the description of the school as set out in the Census. But in doing this it has not been considered necessary to give the full description contained in the Census, but only the head or general classification, such as "National," "Church Education," &c. The word "Convent" or "Workhouse" has been added where it was proper, in order to assist the identification of such schools.

It was obviously a matter of convenience, at least, if not of importance, that the several National schools as returned by the Constabulary should be identified from the Lists annually published by the Commissioners of National Education. In this way anyone could supplement the information concerning those schools contained in the Census by reference to the Reports of the Commissioners of National Education. The plainest and most simple way of indicating such identity was to give in a separate column the Board's Roll Number for each school. This seemed at first sight an easy task. The list of National schools which is annually published in the Appendix to the Report of the Commissioners is arranged according to counties and parishes, and the several schools which may happen to be within the same parish are distinguished by their proper designations, usually drawn from the places where the schools are situated. Now, in the Census the locality, barony, townland, and parish of each school are given, so that it seemed a very simple matter to identify the corresponding schools in the two lists. But it was soon found that the identification was anything but an easy task.

It has been stated already, that in the nomenclature of the National Board "school" and "school-house" are not necessarily synonymous. A boy's and a girl's school, though held in two rooms in the same building and under the same roof are reckoned as two schools, with separate roll numbers which are not always consecutive. Thus, to take an example at random, Blackwatertown School, in the county of Armagh, has the roll numbers 384 and 7,954. On the other hand, as the most cursory glance at the Census will show, "school" and "school-house" with the Constabulary were in almost all cases synonymous. It accordingly happens that in many instances a single school as returned by the Constabulary is equivalent to more than one school according to the classification of the National Board. This difference in nomenclature and the non-consecutiveness of the roll numbers of the school departments in the same building was a difficulty, but by no means the greatest.

The name by which the school is designated in the list of the National Board was not always the same as that under which it had been returned by the Constabulary. A glance at the Index, in which the names printed in italics are those of the Board's List, will show how extensive this discrepancy was; and yet numerous as are the instances of difference of name which have been printed in the Index, they form but a portion only of the cases of this difference which really exist.

In some instances the difference of name was traceable to a corruption of spelling which could be easily accounted for by a correct phonetic spelling of the Irish name, as it was heard pronounced, or by an imperfect attempt to represent the common Anglicized name.

Generally, the difference between the Ordnance Survey names and those of the National Board's List of schools is not so great that the corresponding names cannot be easily recognised. The following examples of variation in the orthography of school names, taken from many hundreds, show the necessity of an organic orthography of school names, and of a more careful revision of the Board's List of schools while passing through the press:—

County.	Ordnance Survey Name.	National Board Name.
Armagh,	Annagelliff,	Annagelliff.
	Castletown,	Castletown.
	Drumshanahan,	Drumshanahan.
Cavan,	Drumgood,	Drumgood.
Cork,	Ballyhary,	Ballyhary.
Donegal,	Anglinish,	Anglinish.
	Aghamishin,	Aghamishin.
	Dunrogey,	Dunrogey.
	Kilteague,	Kilteague and Kiltrock.
	Killynure,	Killynure.
	Templeman,	Templeman.
Down,	Ballytrahan,	Ballytrahan.
	Ballyvaughan,	Ballyvaughan.
Mayo,	Ballyvaughan,	Ballyvaughan.

Sometimes, however, the alteration attributable to the causes above specified is so great as almost to defy identification. Thus, Glasdrumman can with difficulty be deciphered out of Glesterma; and Lackbroder scarcely suggests Loughfouder.

We have already referred to two cases (Parkgrove and Ballycattan) where the names were quite different. Instances of such differences are very numerous. In some cases, a reference to the Ordnance Survey maps was sufficient to decide the identity of the school, with the aid of the topographical data given in the Census. But the number of cases in which all these various circumstantial sources of information were insufficient to fix the identity of the school were very numerous. When this happened, the course almost invariably adopted was to procure through the Constabulary information as to the Board's Roll Number of the school, the surest means of identification. Upwards of 200 letters have been written on this point alone.

While on this subject, it is right that we should return our special thanks to the Constabulary and Police. In the Introduction to the General Report, the Royal Commissioners have expressed themselves in terms of commendation of "the efficient way in which the statistics required by the Commission had been collected throughout the country by the Constabulary." Similar commendation has been merited by that body for their conduct in connexion with the inquiries which were subsequently addressed to their officers, in order to procure further information or the correction of the inaccuracies which had been discovered. These inquiries have extended over a very long period; they were necessarily desultory, involving often petty and intricate details. It would not be possible to exceed the courtesy and attention which those inquiries received from those gentlemen; and much of the completeness of the Index to the Schools is owing to the assistance thus rendered.

The difference of name was not the only, nor in some cases at least the greatest difficulty in the way of identifying the National schools. After the identity of a school had been fully ascertained by obtaining official information of its roll number, it has been sometimes found that it was not situated in the parish in which it is placed by the Board's List, nor even in the neighbourhood. In some cases the parish set down in the Board's List does not exist in the county to which it is assigned, nor even in any other part of Ireland.

In other instances the parish assigned to the school is not to be found among the civil parishes of the country as marked upon the maps of the Ordnance Survey, but is an ecclesiastical parish (generally Roman Catholic) made up of several civil parishes, or portions of parishes. An example of this is the National school of Ballynamona, in the county of Cavan, and parish of Moybolgue. The parish given in the list of the National Board is Kilmainhamwood. There is no civil parish of this name in Ireland, although there is a Protestant ecclesiastical union so named in the county of Westmeath. There is also a Roman Catholic ecclesiastical parish named Moybolgue and Kilmahankam. A case was given in evidence before the Commission of a school (Broughshane) in the county of Antrim, which according to the Board's List was in two parishes, the upper storey of the house in which the girls' school is held being described as situated in the parish of Skerry, and the lower storey, or boys' school, in the parish of Racavan. This curious duality of parochial designation existed down to the Report for 1868; and the reduction to a single parish appears for the first time in the Appendix to the Report for 1869 which was not published until after the appearance of the evidence taken before the Commission.

A similar case is that of Cahersherkin, in the parish of Clooney, barony of Corcomroe, and county of Clare, which the Constabulary returned as a single school (i.e., school-house), attended by boys and girls. In the Board's Lists this school has two roll numbers, viz., 5,186 for the boys' school and 8,500 for the girls'. In the list for 1868 the boys' school is placed in the parish of Clonlea, and the girls' in that of Clooney, two parishes being thus assigned to the one school-house. In the list for 1869 the parochial duality disappears, both schools being described as situated in the parish of Clonlea, the nearest point of which parish is, as a matter of fact twenty-one miles distant from the place where the school is held.

The case of the Ballymacarrett Schools is an instance of the trouble which will often attend an attempt to identify the schools that appear in the National Board's List of Schools. Ballymacarrett is a suburb of Belfast, and at first sight it would seem that there, if anywhere, the exact locality of every school would be surely ascertained. The following table, giving the localities of the National schools, as reported by the Constabulary, and as set down in the Board's List for 1868, will best show whether this is the case or not.

The contradiction of the two authorities seemed to be complete. The Board's list reported the "Bridge End" School as under Roman Catholic management, but the police reported that of 114 children present on the 25th June, 1868, in the Bridge End School, only 2 were Roman Catholics, while 69 were Presbyterians, and 41 Episcopalians. Several communications were had with Mr. Owen, the Sub-Inspector of the Belfast East Constabulary District, in order to determine with certainty the localities of the schools. That gentleman took great pains to procure accurate information on the subject, and made personal inquiries of the teachers of the several National schools. The result of those inquiries is contained in the preceding table, which gives, on the authority of the Constabulary, the locality where each school is held, the corresponding Roll Numbers of which has been obtained from the principal teachers.

Another instance of difficulty of identification, from a different cause, may also be cited.

Among the Queenstown (co. of Cork) schools is one thus described in the National Board's "List of schools in operation on the 31st December, 1868"—

Roll Number.	Period.	School.	Management.
10,038.	Cumulative.	Queenstown.	Established Church, Clerical. Insensitive.

When preparing the Index, it was found that the only school corresponding to this description was one returned by the Constabulary as a "Presbyterian" National school, and having an attendance on the 25th June, 1868, of 15 Established Church children and 6 Presbyterian children. It seemed so strange that a school under the management of an Episcopalian clergyman could be correctly described as a "Presbyterian" school, that a communication was addressed to the Sub-Inspector of Constabulary at Queenstown. This officer made personal inquiries on the subject, and reported that the school having the roll number 10,038 is attached to the Presbyterian Meeting-house at Queenstown, and that he was informed by the Presbyterian clergyman that he is the manager, and that the school has never been "in operation," i.e., has never had the requisite number (thirty) of scholars. Under these circumstances it is clear that it must have been through error that this school was described in the list for 1868 as under Established Church clerical management. The error was repeated in the list for 1869, with the additional observation that it was "closed."

School Accommodation.—In several of the Returns the Constabulary have noted the fact that large districts exist in many parts of the country which are either wholly destitute of schools or but scantily provided with them. The Royal Commissioners intended to prepare a set of maps, upon which should be marked the sites of all rural Primary Schools, the several classes of schools being indicated by colours or other distinctive marks. These maps would have shown at a glance the geographical distribution of school-houses, where they were too numerous, if there be any districts in which this is the case; where they are too few; and lastly, the districts wholly unprovided with schools. In any scheme for the division of the country into School Districts, with the view of local taxation for the maintenance of schools, as well as for other purposes connected with the better organization of Primary Schools, such maps would be indispensable. In the Appendix to their Report, the Royal Commissioners have printed a scheme of this kind. A good deal of the preliminary work necessary for the construction of such maps was actually done, but the Treasury did not consider it advisable to go to the expense of their preparation.

In the absence of School Maps, Table XVI. has been prepared, in order that the actual distribution of schools, with reference to area and the necessities of the children of "School Age," may be the more readily and the better understood, and to serve as an illustration of the scheme of School Districts above mentioned, and assist in making it more intelligible.

Table XVI. gives for every county and province in Ireland the Land Area, the total Population, as it stood in 1861, the Population in that year of "School Age," that is, the number of children between five and fifteen years of age; the number of schools returned by the Constabulary and Police; the number of children actually found present in those schools on the 25th of June, 1868; the average number of children of "School Age" upon each square mile; the per-centage which the children of "School Age" form of the whole population; the average area in square miles to each existing school; the proportion between the population of "School Age" and the existing school accommodation, that is, the number of children of "School Age" to each existing Primary School; the per-centage which the children actually present at school on the 25th of June, 1868, form of the total school population; and lastly, the average number of children found present on that day in each school.

This Table will also be found useful in connexion with the important question of "Payment by Results."

Errors in the Printed Census.—The printed Census, as has been stated, underwent three revisions :—First, a collation with the original District Returns ; secondly, a careful reading during the preparation of the Summary and Analytical Tables ; and thirdly, a thorough examination as to localities and description of schools, in preparing the Alphabetical Index of Schools. The errors made by the Constabulary in transferring the Local Returns to the large form or District Return, and the errors made in the office of the Commission in preparing the Returns for the press, and which were detected during the first two revisions, have been fully discussed in the preceding pages. The errors, whether of the Constabulary or of the office, which were detected during the third revision in preparing the Index, have now to be considered. The errors and omissions detected during this final revision are indicated for the most part in foot notes in the Alphabetical Index. Only those which affect in any way the Summary Tables, and the numbers quoted from them in the Report of the Commission, need be noticed here. These errors are as follows :—

I. Wrong Entry of the Religious Denominations of Children.

Aghagallon (Antrim) p. 11, No. 420. The children of this school, numbering seventy-three, were all Roman Catholics, and have been erroneously printed in the column for Presbyterians.

II. Wrong Entry of Attendance, e.g., such as putting that of one School for another.

The attendance of the Cabra Convent Schools, county of Dublin, has been incorrectly entered. It should have been as follows :—

No. 318, Cabra Convent, St. Mary's Poor,	Boys, 50 ; Girls, 100
" 319, Do. St. Mary's Deaf and Dumb Institution,	" 140
" 320, Do. St. Mary's Boarding School,	" 70

III. Schools connected with the National Board, which are described as not connected with that Body.

1. City of Cork, p. 173.

No. 32, Great George's-street, Presentation Monks,	Total Number of Boys, 319
" 40, Douglas-street, do.	" 453
" 41, Do. (Convent) Presentation Nuns,	Total Number of Girls, 794

Or a total to be added to children in National Schools, and to be deducted from the total of non-National Schools—boys, 773, and girls, 794.

IV. Schools described as being in connexion with the National Board, which are not National Schools.

a. Convent Schools.

Liscon (Dublin, No. 44, p. 107). Paying School of Presentation Nuns, . Total number of Girls, 13

This number should be deducted from the total of National School children, and added to total of schools "Not Primary."

Lismore (Waterford, No. 75, p. 169), Convent School, . Total Number of Children, 118

This number is to be deducted from the total of "Convent National Schools," and added to total of "Convent not National Schools."

b. Church Education Schools.

Magherabeg (Down, No. 14, p. 37),	Total Number of Children, 58

Sarraz (Cork, No. 635, p. 185),	" 17
Inchigoleagh (Cork, No. 442, p. 156),	" 16
Total,	122

This number is to be deducted from total of National Schools, and added to total of Church Education Schools.

c. Private Schools.

Clonsilla (Longford, No. 46, p. 70).	Total Number of Children,	17
Monaster, Male (Kilkenny, No. 72, p. 98),	of Boys,	32
Do. Female (Do. No. 73, p. 98),	of Girls,	31
Cragganaboola (Roscommon, No. 65, p. 134),	"	12
Carrick-on-Suir (Tipperary, p. 154)—
County Number, 246,	"	70
" 247,	"	50
" 248,	"	53
" 249,	"	16
" 253,	"	62
" 255,	"	12
	Total of Private Schools,	266

This number is to be deducted from the total of National Schools, of which 125 are to be added to that of the "Private Assisted" Schools, and 170 to that of "Private Unassisted." The Constabulary returned all the above Carrick-on-Suir schools as "National Model," at the same time explaining, in the column of "Observations," that they merely understood by this term that the schools in question were "conducted after the manner of the National Schools."

V. Private Schools made Church Education Schools.

Shandon-street (Cork, No. 16, p. 173).	Total Number of Children,	67

This number is to be deducted from the total of the Church Education Schools, and added to that of "Private not Assisted."

As these errors in the Printed Census were discovered after the preparation of the Summary and Analytical Tables, and the publication of the General Report of the Commissioners, in which those Tables are used, they could not be corrected in the Tables themselves without giving rise to great inconvenience and confusion; nor is it necessary to mention in detail the numbers in the Tables affected by those errors, which, except in one instance, are so small as to scarcely affect the total numbers, and do not sensibly alter the per-centages given in the General Report. It may, however, be useful to give in the following Tables the total numbers directly or indirectly used in the Report which require correction. Anyone using the Census for statistical purposes can readily make the necessary detailed corrections for each county and province affected by the errors.

NOTE.—In some cases where schools were found closed on the 25th June, the attendance of a previous day was given, and was included in the census tables. In each of the cases occurring in Sligo, Donegal, and Tipperary, an average supplied by the Patron or Teacher was returned, and was made use of in the Tables of Mixed Schools, but was not used in making out the Table of Attendance. To this circumstance is due the difference in the number of "No Returns" in the various Tables.

EXPLANATION OF ABBREVIATIONS USED IN 8TH COLUMN OF EDUCATIONAL CENSUS RETURNS.

The following is a list (arranged in alphabetical order) of the Abbreviations used in the Printed Census, to indicate the special description of the Societies or Bodies with which, according to the Constabulary, several of the Schools are connected. It is easy to perceive that, in some cases, the descriptions are not technically accurate, and that the same Society, or Body, has been designated by different descriptions. Thus—Presentations House, Presentation Sisters, Presentation Convent, are all different ways of indicating the same religious Society. Similarly, the phrases, Wesleyan Methodists, Methodists, Wesleyan Body, Wesleyan Society, do not imply different Bodies.

But it was considered advisable in this matter, as in others, to adhere faithfully to the language employed by the Constabulary in their Returns, even with some sacrifice of technical accuracy. At the same time, as the examples given above show, the Constabulary descriptions are substantially correct, and quite sufficient for all who have any acquaintance with the subject.

* This school has been discontinued so long that no Roll Number exists now for it.

† The school with the Roll Number 1273 is described in the Roll Number for 1818 as St. Michael's (Jamaica's Friend Society); the contemporary, however, reports that there is no such school in that year.

‡ "There is no school in the town of Bellef of any kind."—Contemporary News, supra, page 18, No. 128.

* Wicklow (National) School not connected.

N.B.—The total number of schools is really only 4,017, and not the last number, 4,021, in the column of marginal figures. The discrepancy arises from marginal numbers having been given, through oversight, in this Index to some of the anonymous copies of the Introduction, p. xxix.
